The screenshot shows a digital learning interface titled "Terminology and Abbreviations +". It features a main text area with a definition: "When groups of people or nations get together to tackle major world issues and solve problems, the resulting organisation is often given a title that can be represented by an abbreviation." Below this are four examples, each with a dropdown menu for the full name and an arrow pointing to the abbreviation: "UN = United", "NATO = North", "EFTA = European Free", and "UNESCO = United Nations". A yellow callout box with a pencil icon contains the text: "Remember - You need to know what each organisation does. Make a note to find out if you don't already know." At the bottom, there is an illustration of five men in suits with speech bubbles containing the terms "Stem Cells", "Cloning", "Nuclear Energy", and "Global Warming". On the right side, a sidebar shows a student profile for "David Brown" with a "Marks: 5/30" indicator and "Screens: 3/10" indicator. At the bottom of the sidebar are "BACK" and "NEXT" buttons.
